Served Them Right.

During the present war, says the Indi anapolis Journal, many families of rebel officers have e-tablished themselves in the North, where they have enjoyed all the protection and benefits accorded to our most loyal people, and have been enabled o act as spies without interruption. We believe that the wives of at least two rebel generals are now domiciled in the city of New York, and it is not long since the wife and daughter of the pirate Semmes used to receive marked attention at balls, and other places of amusement in another of our Northern cities, from soft-headed fors who took this method of showing their admiration for rebellion and robbery. Presuming on the past indulgence of our authorities, the wife, daughter and son of the rebel General Preston, formerly of Louisville, recently arrived at Boston from England, where, much to their surprise, they were refused permission to land, and were also denied the privilege of going by ail to Canada. This is right. We have no use in this conatry for rebels in high life, and they can do us more mischief in Canada than they could here. Their proper place is down South with their rebel protectors.

An Important Discovery.

From the New York Journal of Commerce. The public will be interested to learn that the claim of Prof. Guessling (a Ger man chemist, residing, we believe at Cininnati,) to the discovery of a new process whereby crystalized sugar can be made from corn starch, is about to be put to a practical test. It was said that the professor had succeeded by this process in obsaining three and a half to four gallons of beautiful white syrup from a bushel of corn; and had at last solved the problem which has heretofore puzzled the chemists all over the world, by discovering a method of turning this syrup into granulared spear, similar to the product of the cane. The production of the syrup is doubtless true, although we may be a little skeptical in regard to the quantity said to be obtained from a bushel of corn. This syrup is beautifully white, and can be used even in tea without darkening the infusion .-Morever the process is said to be so simple that it may be carried on in a small way in the kitchen of any farm house, with only the ordinary household utensils. If this symp can be crystalized like the sacchatine matter from cane, then the whole world may well be called upon to rejoice over the discovery. A company of wealthy gentlemen in this city have purchased the secret we understand, for $400,000, and having taken the steps to obtain a patent, propose to erect a factory to test its usefulness. We have also been told, although we have not the means at hand to verify the information, that an old process is on record for making syrup from potato starch, which is very similar to the discovery above noticed. The Northwestern States of America are the greatest sources of the world's production of maize or Indian corn. The vast prairies are capable of producing an almost unlimited supply of corn, and, under the process of development to which they have been subjugated, the problem has arisen, as to how their world and made available in the great economy of life.

The corn crop of the west, limitless as it may be in the inture, is now destined to become the source of the world's supply of sugar, or its equivalent, syrup, and the West, the repository of untold wealth .--The new era of sugar manufacture will, to a great extent, derange the old currents of trade. The west will become a great suburns, scalds, cholic, diarrhea gar-producing, as well as a great corngrowing region. Its great staple will be compacted both in bulk and value, for the manipulations of commerce. The sugar consumed by the West will be cheapened by escaping eastward freight on the corn required to produce it, and the west-ward freight on the manufactured staple.

CARRIER'S ADDRESS, TO THE PATRONS OF THE Marshall County Republican, Januar, 2, 1865.

PATRONS AND FRIENDS .- Again I come, Now the sands of Sixty-Four are run, I come to you, with this my lay, On this auspicious New Year's day.

The old year now has run its race, And I have not the time or space, To tell you all that has been done, Since over us his reign begun.

He found us in a bloody strife, Our nation gasping for its life; Foul Treason strove with impious hand, To banish Freedom from our land.

In Chattanooga, held at bay,

Our shattered western army lay, While vale, and hill, and stony crag, Were bristling with the troops of Bragg. And in Virginia, sore reverse Had met our arms, -and what was worse, Lee threatened with his traitor band

To burn our seat of Government. But Vicksburg's hero now we see, Upon the soil of Tennessee, Which made the foemen feel the weight Of Generalship, for them too great.

To cross Potomae's shining strand;

And loudly threatened that he meant

The rebel host at rest secure. Deciming their route of Grant was shure, And all was merry with them now, Behind their works on Lookout's brow.

While all below is still profound, To traitors ears is borne no sound, Yet from that plane where sitence slept, Our noble Union Army swept, And soon the rebs in wonder blank, Beneld our boys on front and flank. In vain they strove to push clear through, The serried canks of union blue.

They're driven from their strongest hold,

And victory crowned our soldiers bold. Then on, o'er vale and mountain top, Cur noble army did not stop, 'Till yielding to their shot and shell, Fell Georgia's strongest citadel,

And now the rail road city lies, A ruined heap beneath the skies, While desolation reigns around. Where peace and plenty did abound.

That army which was held at bay, Where does their banner wave to day? Hundreds of miles from Tennessee, It proudly floats beside the sea. And Lee, the haughty rebel chief, Poor soul has come to sudden grief;

For though it did not suit his grace. Grant forced him to change his base, From where Potomac's waters fall To Richmond's canon guarded wall. And le's Grant's prisoner you can bet, As safe as in Fort Lafavette, The Union chief has drawn his line And Richmond's bound to fall this time.

Our Navy claims a notice too, God bless her hardy, gallant crew; Who 'tis our nation's pride to see, Ri 'e fearless o'er the trackless sea.

She never from a forman steers, And proud old Britain is to be No more the mistress of the sea. Old pirate Semmes, the scalaurag, Sailed long beneath the rebel rag;

Though young it be in point of years,

With France and England to secrete This highway robber of the deep. By the success he'd always had, He thought to whip our Ireaclad,

The Alabama came off slim And Captain Semmes was forced to swim The Albermale, the southern boast, And Florida, off Brazil's coast, With many more which I might name,

To show our provess on the main. But while we view with honest pride, The gathering strength on freedom's side, We'll drop a tear-more softly tread Above our nation's glorious dead, Who sleep within their unknown grave.

They met death in a thousand forms, In quiet camp, and battles storms. Hundreds within the slaver's power, Have lingered many a weary hour, Their covering Heaven's arching dome, The cold damp earth their couch alone; 'Till with their last expiring breath. The sufferer gladly welcomed death.

Upon the soil they died to save.

To speak their praise we'll never tire, While burns one spark of freedom's fire: And cherished shall their memory be Who fought and died for liberty.

Not on the tented field alone, Is heroism,-but at home-The soldier leaves, perhaps a wife, Or mother, sister, in whose life Is courage true, that bright will shine, Coeveal with the life of Time.

The valor of the battle field, Before that wife and mother yield, Who gave their boy and husband brave, On southern soil to find a grave. God cover their defenseless head.

Now their protecting friends are dead. They sit beside a vacant chair. And habiliments of mourning wear. Then may our people not despise

The widow's wail, the orphan's cries,

But nobly stand in place of him

Who tell amid the battle's din. The year has carried to the grave, The young, the beautiful and brave, Some have gone to the silent tomb, In robust health, at life's high noon, While thousands by diseases led,

Have joined the nations of the dead. The tender plant that God had given, Has been transplanted tack to heaven; And hoary age with locks of snow, Has gone where all must shortly go.

Spring, Summer, Autumn, Winter come, The same course then again begun, And thus the world moves on apace, We die, and others take our place, And so it has been all the way, From Adam down until this day. The New Year finds our graineries filled

With all the wealth from earth distilled;

Of corn and wheat we have our share,

And some to foreign nations spare.

While 'neath the surface of the ground, Exhaustless mineral wealth is found, Old ocean bears upon her breast, The products of the fertile west, In ships, whose starry flag's unfurled, In every harbor of the world.

The angel Peace has spread her hands Between us and all foreign lands, Though despots see with jealous eye The star of Freedom rising high.

Which, like the star of Bethlehem, It's beauteous light will ere long send, Until our earth's dark corners shine With liberty to all mankind. No words of mine can ere convey

The loyal mass of human minds Around our liberty entwines. No power beneath the circling sun Can check the murch so well begun,

The powers above bave clothed with might

The half we see this NEW YEAR'S DAY.

The cause of Justice, Truth and Right. Then let it come-we only pray, God speed the longed for, happy day, When peace again throughout our land Shall on the base of freedom stand.

And then our flig-God bless each star That shipes undimned through clouds of war. Glorious stripes, we love you well Since neath your fold our brothers fell, As borne by victory on high, Thy colors blessed his dieing eye.

Proud emblem that our fathers gave, Still float above the land and wave, And palsied be the hand that dare, That banner from the staff to tear.

And now kind friends enough is said,-My annual message you have read. And if wrong views in them there be. I know you'll not fall out with me. For I have harriedly glanced o'er, The great events of Sixty-Four; And in my next I hope to tell, That what's begun has nded well.

Now of myself what shall I say. I've been among you day by day, Through mud and rain and snow and sleet, I've brought your paper every week. Now, I propose through sixty five. If you are well, and I'm alive, To be around each Thursday morn, Though clear or cloudy, cold or warm, And to deposit as before, The Union paper at your door. And now kind patrons, thanks to you, For patience in hearing me through. May blessings of health, and of peace. Surround you as years shall increase. And now with the best of good cheer I wish you a "HAPPY NEW YEAR!" And if you'd know life's highest joy Deal generous by the

The Washington Chronicle tells of the visit of two ladies from Tennessee to the President this week, Thursday, who went to obtain the release of their husbands, held as prisoners at Johnson's Island. They were put off until Friday, when they came again, and were again put off until Saturday. At each of the interviews one of the ladies urged that her husband was a religious man, and on Saturday, when the President ordered the relase of the prisoners, he said to this Jady: You say your husband is a religous man. The following touching story is told by the Melbourne (Australia) correspondent of the London Times :

Some weeks back, at the station of Mr Dugald Smith, at Horsham, two boys and a girl, aged respectively the oldest boy nine, the girl seven, and the youngest boy five, the children of a carpenter named Duff, wandered by themselves into the bush and were lost.
